

FACTS REGARDING THE HESSIAN FLY

Expert Furnishes Statement Explaining Operation and Development of the Insect.

MUCH INTEREST TO FARMERS

An Effort Will Be Made in Jackson County to Protect Fields From Destructive Enemy.

Many of the farmers of the county are giving considerable attention to the work of the Hessian fly which has proven very destructive to many of the wheat fields this year. Last fall the fly first made its appearance, and many of the fields were so badly damaged that the growing wheat was plowed under and other seed sown. Throughout the county the late sown wheat is the best and very little of that is damaged.

An effort will be made by the farmers next fall to protect the fields from the fly, and many of them are already securing information as to the best manner in which this can be done. Purdue University has taken an interest in the wheat conditions of Indiana and has given some very good instructions regarding the time to sow and the care which must be given.

It is expected that the wheat crop this summer will be below the average, although from various reports the wheat which is not damaged by the fly is in standard condition. As there is much interest in the condition of the farm crops the farmers may report to this office the present condition of their wheat and other crops.

Regarding the Hessian Fly a circular describing the operations and development of the fly gives the following which will be of much interest:

The Hessian fly is always present in the wheat fields of the country, and showing recently in the far western edge. Early sown wheat provides food for the insect and the great fecundity of the female has full play. The eggs, deposited on the plant, hatch small silvery maggots in a brief period; these eat their way to the joint of the young plant, enter the larva stage, and remain all winter. In his stage they resemble flax seeds.

When infestation is bad the plants are often killed before winter; if well rooted, survive, and putting out ruder stems with growing weather, frequently show full development and remove all fear of damage. At this stage the larva—the flax seed—discharges the full-fledged flies. The insect is very small, not over a quarter of an inch in length, and looks like a very small mosquito, and under a close inspection shows a dark body, mosquitoes being light colored. The spring brood seldom leaves the field in which it is bred, the fall brood being the migrant. Where infestation is heavy the entire field is taken by the young maggots, females laying upwards of a hundred eggs. Lighter infestation does not show until the plant joints, when the maggots, in the larva stage, choke the growth at the lower joint where they are imbedded. A small infestation, of one larva to a stem, does not show until approaching harvest, when the filling head of wheat becomes too heavy for the constricted joint and the stem falls. No Hessian fly infested stem ever reaches harvest.

SPECIAL SESSION

Of Legislature May be Called to Make Apportionment.

A special session of the Indiana General Assembly will be called in the event Congress should reduce the apportionment of Indiana's representation from thirteen to twelve. Governor Marshall said a special session would be necessary in the event the representation should be reduced or it would be necessary to elect twelve representatives at large.

It is considered probable by members of both political faiths in Indiana that the representation will be reduced. It is stated on good authority that the present representation would give the Republicans a decided advantage in the electoral college two years hence, and it is believed to be within the range of probabilities that these Democrats will unite with a majority of the Republicans to increase the unit of representation to prevent an increase in the number of representatives in the Lower House of Congress.

BIG CATTLE SHIPMENT.

Nine Cars Sent From Medora For Market in London.

Medora is acquiring the reputation as a cattle shipping center. During the past few months a large number of cars have been loaded there and shipped to all parts of the United States and England. The cattle which are purchased are of fine stock and are in demand by all the large dealers.

This morning nine cars were loaded for London, England, and this afternoon two for Cincinnati. The cattle are purchased by D. M. Hughes for Swift & Company, of Chicago. Next Saturday another shipment of ten cars will be made to Cincinnati and from that point they will be reshipped to other places. The cattle weigh an average of 1,500 pounds. In the lot which went to London there was 133 head, and 34 were shipped to Cincinnati. They were purchased at a cost of $13,325.

NO JURY TRIAL

During the Term of Court Which Closed Friday.

The circuit court adjourned for this term Friday. The term has not been a busy one and it was the first time for seven years that there has not been a trial by jury. The cases in which a jury would have been needed were all dismissed, continued, compromised or otherwise settled without a trial. A four weeks' term will begin at Scottsburg Monday. The next term in this county will begin the first week in May.

B. & O. BUILDING NEW SIDE TRACK

Constructed From Switch in Front of Passenger Depot to Chestnut Street.

TRAINS DELAYED IN WAITING

Westbound Freight Trains Can Leave Immediately Upon Arrival of Eastbound Trains.

In order to prevent the delay of freight trains in entering and leaving the railroad yards the B. & O. S-W. is building a new siding on the north side of its main track from the switch in front of the passenger depot to Chestnut street. The switch lever will be located near the intersection of Chestnut street.

The new track has been needed for some time as considerable time is lost by the departing trains when waiting for the arrival of others. At the present time westbound freight trains scheduled to leave upon the arrival of an eastbound train are unable to get upon the main track until the incoming train has pulled into the switch. Often a freight is ready to leave, but is delayed five minutes or longer in waiting until the eastbound passenger leaves the station or the incoming freight is in the clear.

With the new track the freight trains which are given orders to leave the yards upon the arrival of an eastbound train can pull into the new siding and as soon as the last car of the incoming train is past the switch the waiting train can pull out upon the main track.

The new track will also give the yardmen more room to make up their trains while at the present time trains working in the west end of the yards are often delayed in waiting for track room. The B. & O. S-W. owns the right-of-way along its main track, and permission* was granted by the council to cross Chestnut street. After the second track is laid on St. Louis avenue from Indianapolis avenue to Chestnut street there will still remain sufficient room for vehicles.

The company recently completed about six miles of new side tracks in the east end of the yards and they have been of much advantage. With the new track which is now in the course of construction the trains will not be delayed in leaving for either direction, and it is expected that still better time can be made by the fast freights.

PROPOSED IMPROVEMENT

Of The Streets is a Subject of Much Interest.

The proposed improvement of Ewing, Chestnut and Walnut streets is the chief subject of conversation these days, and the property owners are discussing the various kinds of materials which they prefer, that is if they are in favor of the improvement. Many of the property owners are in favor of the improvement, while others are circulating a petition against having the work done.

The remonstrances, if any are filed must be signed by eighty per cent of the property owners who reside in the city. Persons owning property along the streets which are to be improved but live outside the city cannot sign the petitions. These remonstrances may be filed at any time before April 5.

The council has set April 27 as the time for giving the property owners a hearing. At this time they will decide if the property will be benefited to the amount of the estimated assessment against it for such improvement.

BURNED TO DEATH

Mrs. John Hays Falls Into An Open Fire Place.

Mrs. John Hays, a middle aged woman, residing near Mt. Olive, was burned to death Friday by falling in an open fire place. It is supposed from the position in which Mrs. Hays was found, that she suffered a sudden attack of heart trouble and pitched forward into the fire.

Ten minutes before a boy, who works at the Hays home, found her in a dying condition. Mrs. Hays had been to the barn talking with her husband. The boy called Mr. Hays and hurried for a physician, but long before the physician arrived she had died. During the ten minutes that she lived following the accident, she did not regain consciousness. The clothing had been burned from the unfortunate woman's form and the flesh was burned to a crisp.

LAST EFFORT OF PRESIDENT DIAZTo Quell the Rising Wave of Revolution.

THROWS CABINET OVERBOARD

Will Retirement of the Old Advisers of Mexico's President Strengthen Aged Ruler's Stand, or Will It Mark Beginning of the End of His Regime, Is the Question That Anxiously Is Being Asked in Washington.

Washington, March 25.—The retirement of the Diaz cabinet is regarded here as a final effort on the part of President Diaz and his followers to quiet the rising revolutionary storm in Mexico. Just how much immediate seriousness is to be attached to the resignations is uncertain here. They afford conclusive evidence that the situation in Mexico is more alarming than the Washington officials have cared to admit, but whether the retirement of the cabinet is a beginning of the end of the Diaz regime, or whether it will result in strengthening the aged ruler's stand is a question that officials will not discuss. The opinion was expressed in many quarters that the retirement of the Diaz cabinet was the contingency which President Taft had in mind when he ordered the troops to the Mexican frontier.

LIMANTOUR STARTED IT

There Had Been Friction Ever Since His Return Home.

Mexico City, March 25.—President Diaz's entire cabinet has resigned. Diaz is withholding acceptance of the resignations. It is known, however, that the resignations of Ministers Creel, Molino, Fernandez and probably Cosío will be accepted. Limantour's portfolio will be changed from finance to foreign relations, which Creel now holds. The names of the new members of the cabinet are not known.

The resignations came last night after a day that had been spent in conferences. It was evident that matters of vital importance were being discussed, but all efforts to get any information as to what was going on were unavailing. Not one of those most directly interested would say a word. To all inquiries they returned the invariable reply that they had pledged themselves to refuse to discuss the situation in any of its aspects. All government officials said they had been instructed to say nothing, and especially not to confirm or to deny rumors that might be in circulation as to the political status of events.

As the cabinet ministers emerged from the conference with the president they were questioned one at a time, but not one of them would divulge the slightest clue to what had taken place in the executive offices. They joined in saying that any information as to what had transpired must come from President Diaz himself. Later the information was given out that all the cabinet ministers had handed in their resignations, but it was not stated whether they had been accepted. It is known, however, that those of Creel, Fernandez, Molino and probably that of Cosío will be accepted. It is also said that Limantour will be retained and that he will be transferred from the post of minister of finance to that of minister of foreign affairs.

It is known that there has been much friction among the members of the cabinet since the return of Minister Limantour from his trip abroad. The other members of the cabinet seemed to be dissatisfied with the plans which Limantour brought back with him from the United States.

On the best authority it is stated that Vice President Corral will hand his resignation to congress as soon as that body meets. This will be on April 2. Corral, it is added, will leave the country for an extended trip in Europe on April 12. He has already engaged steamship accommodations for his trip across the ocean.

The reported dissension in the cabinet has had a very depressing effect on public opinion. It had been thought until now that the government was getting the upper hand of the situation, but this development leads to the conclusion that the end of the political troubles is farther off than at any time before. It is pointed out that those in authority are badly divided as to the proper course to pursue in putting down the insurrection, and this has impressed the general public badly.

He was not highly successful as a painter, though he was the first president of the National Academy of Design from 1826 to 1842. In 1832 he designed the electric telegraph, a working model of which he placed on exhibition three years later. After he had made many futile efforts to enlist either private or governmental aid in the invention congress at last granted an appropriation in 1843 for the building of a telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore, the first in the world.

AUTOMATIC WEATHER STRIP FOR A DOOR

When the floors of an old house are not level by reason of the settling of the walls or partitions an automatic weather strip may be made for doors that have openings of varying widths between the floor and the under side of the door, thus doing away with the unsightly mats or rugs that are sometimes used for the purpose. The strip is made of a piece of wood 3/4 in. thick and 3 in. wide. One end of the strip is fastened to the hinge side of the door, on the inside, with a screw. A piece of wood is cut out and fastened to the other side of the door to act as a "keeper" for the strip. A piece of cloth is wrapped around the strip to make it close fitting and to lessen the noise when opening and closing the door. The movable strip will slip over the uneven surface of the floor and close the opening beneath its edge when the door is shut.—From Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"After taking Cardui, I am now well and can recommend it to other suffering women."

Just such doubtful symptoms, as those from which Mrs. Smith suffered, are the ones for which it will pay you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is at such times, when there is nothing to show, for certain, the real cause of the trouble, that you need a tonic, to give the body strength to throw off the illness that evidently threatens.

Take Cardui, when you are ill, with the ailments of your sex. Take Cardui as a tonic, to prevent illness, when you feel it coming.

CHAPTER VII.

JIMMY VALENTINE slowly recovered from the shock he experienced at beholding before him the man who had in the old days been his accomplice in many questionable adventures. No; he had concluded wrongly. No; he was not yet free from all the associations of the years past—those years which he was endeavoring to forget.

"Hello, Red," he finally addressed Flanagan. "Come out from behind the curtain. The coast is clear for you. How did you know I was here?" Red came forth. "Oh, leave it to me, Jimmy, to keep track of an old pal." He held out his hand, which Valentine listlessly shook.

Red could not understand his former companion's indifferent manner. "What's wrong?" he asked.

"Nothing."

"Aw, cut it out. Somebun's got you guessin', an' so don't try to kid me."

The released convict looked meditatively at Red. Then he spoke.

"Red, did you ever 'do a bit'?"

"Sure—Joliet."

"And you have been in one of those rotten holes and still think it's a good game?"

"You've weakened—eh?" sneered Red.

"I've turned square."

"You're crazy."

"No; it's only the man who thinks he can beat the law who's crazy," said Valentine.

"You'd a won out if it hadn't been for that Cotton, who blew on you because you beat him out of a dame."

Valentine turned and clutched him by the arm.

"You rat, don't you ever speak of her again or I'll murder you." He threw Red roughly away from him.

"Now, get out of here and forget you know me."

"Good God, Jimmy!" exclaimed the other. "I wouldn't say anything to hurt your feelings. Why, I'd do anything for you; I'd a done your bit if I could have. Why, I'd go to h—l for you."

"Will you turn square with me? That's all I want of you now. Let's you and I start now and from this minute on go square, if we starve in the streets. Will you do that, Red?" Valentine spoke in intense earnestness.

Red hesitated. "One job to get a stake and I'll go you," he said eagerly.

Valentine appreciated the characteristic unwillingness of Red to leave his lifelong vocation—that of riding strong boxes and safes deemed by their manufacturers to be "fire and burglar proof." True, the flames were sometimes foiled by the thicknesses of metal and asbestos, but rarely had Red Flanagan been foiled by mere inanimate metal or time locks—rarely, indeed, when accompanied by No. 1289, the man who, as Warden Handler described him, opened safes solely by the sense of touch. Valentine knew the hold that the unlawful life he, too, had followed invariably secured on its votaries, and he was not surprised when Red hesitated to leave it for the dubious rewards of "going straight."

"No," answered Valentine; "nothing for me but work from now on—work, honest work, hard manual labor if necessary. I've quit the old game for keeps, Red."

Red, plainly nonplused at this revolutionary change of heart in his former "pal," stood speechless for a moment. Jimmy Valentine, the best man in the country in his line, had "turned square." Merciful saints! Was the world coming to an end? At last he recovered his ability to talk.

He had an inspiration that he thought might win Valentine over, might make him come to his senses.

"What about the coppers?" suggested Red. "Are you dippy enough to think they'd let you turn square?"

"Yes. Why not?" retorted Valentine like a flash. "What have they got to do with honest men?"

Again did Red find cause to actually doubt the sanity of his ex-confederate, for here he was overlooking entirely in his childish reasoning the remorseless, dismal certainty that the detectives would force him to "peach" on his old pals or any one else in the underworld of whom he could obtain information desired by the police. In short, Valentine had overlooked the "stool pigeon game," the despair of every crook who had ever tried to "go straight."

"Aw, don't kid yourself," warned Red. "The copper'll let you be square if you're a stool pigeon, if you tip off old pals. No other way."

"Absurd! How, for instance, could they 'do' me?"

"Absurd, eh? What about Kid

Steele? He turned square, but he wouldn't squeal, and job after job they threw him out of till he was hungry in the street. Then a copper offered to stake him to a feed if he'd 'turn up' an old pal. And he murdered the cop on the spot, and now he's doing life. Turn square, eh? That means be a stool or a bun in our game."

Red raised his hands testily and turned his face away from Valentine.

"Beat the coppers," insisted the other. "Get away where they can't find you. We can do that."

"Yes, we can," Red again faced his friend. "Why, Doyle is in town to see you now."

"Doyle here?" in alarm.

"Yes. I met him when he got off the 'rattler.' He's going to give you your orders, and you'll have to do as he tells you if you turn square. He knows you beat it. He was laying for Avery when he came out and told him to report once a month. And what about Avery? You sent him to me, and we've been at work on something."

"Where is Avery?" asked Valentine quickly.

"Want to see him?"

"Yes; I can explain better," Valentine crossed the parlor and peered through the portieres.

Red went to the opposite doorway and softly called, "Oh, Bill!"

Avery, dressed in a roughly cut ready made suit of clothes and looking in much better health than he did on the day he defied Detective Doyle and finished his term in Sing Sing, came slowly into the hotel parlor.

"Hello, Bill! You're taking a chance," greeted Valentine, "and you are, too, Red."

"I had to see you," returned Avery. "I have just been telling Red"—

"Sure, I heard you hand out that 'square' talk. I suppose you want me to join you in this 'going straight' business, too, eh?"

"I don't think the crooked game is any good. And you are getting old for clever work."

"Think so, eh?" snarled Avery suspiciously.

"He isn't too old to be an 'outside man' with us," put in Red.

"We don't need any outside man any more, Red," decided Valentine.

Avery glared into the speaker's face. "So you're out now, and you're going to throw Red and me out, eh? All this turning square talk I heard was a stall to get rid of me because I am old, eh?"

"I don't have to stall you, Avery."

The old thief leaned threateningly toward Valentine, shaking his withered fist as violently as the flabby muscles, sapped by years of prison air and prison fare, would permit.

"Like the d—l!" he cried, choking in his wrath. "I'm old, that's your hope. Going to throw me for a rookie, eh? Well, I'll show you. When guys start stalling me I'll show them up. From now on I'm a copper, and I'll show you up, Valentine. I'll get you, too—I'll get you good!"

Red Flanagan had won a continent wide reputation as a "smooth worker." He was one of those painstaking, conscientious burglars who followed habitually the laudable practice of looking after details. His employers, among whom had been Jimmy Valentine, "Chicago Whitey" and other leaders in their profession, had in the past shown a flattering willingness to recommend him (not in their own handwriting, to be sure) as a thorough artist, an untiring student and one who one day would probably revolutionize the business of caring for other people's money. In a word, Red was thorough, which means a great deal in his line.

So, true to his reputation, Red, fearing complications because of the pitch to which Avery had unconsciously raised his voice, had stepped behind the portieres to keep watch on the short hallway that led to it. This hallway opened out into the main hall of the hotel, at the far end of which was ized that a casual passerby might become suspicious of Avery's words should they be overheard. Besides, the implacable Doyle was in town. A friend of his, a "runner" for Doc Slater's faro bank, had so informed Red that very morning.

Red suddenly issued a warning hiss. "Duck, Avery! Here comes Doyle!"

The two thieves, having no opportunity to do better, hastily concealed themselves behind the portieres.

Valentine, very much disturbed, made an effort to calm himself. He seated himself beside a convenient table. He picked up a magazine and began to peruse its pages in seemingly unconcerned fashion.

"Hello, Jimmy!"

With these words Detective George Doyle entered the room. Garmented in the latest cut of fashionable clothing, panama hat and patent leather ties with batwing laces, he appeared the dilettante, the man about town, rather than the tracker of desperate men—the man of leisure, every inch of him, an uninitiated observer would have pardonably judged not only from his attire, but also from his debonaire, blasé manner. Any one describing Doyle as the man who broke up the "Five Points" gang and the "Whyo" gang in New York city would have been laughed at for his folly, yet such was his record. His work in scattering the troupes of election and primary day "floaters" and "repeaters" in some of the most disreputable districts was equally meritorious.

Jimmy Valentine turned his head slightly to answer Doyle, who, he well knew, came on no errand that would benefit a released prisoner.

"How are you, Doyle?" he replied indifferently.

Doyle's shifting, farseeing eyes, however, caught the nervous twitching of Valentine's fingers as they ran over the edges of the magazine.

"You're perfectly innocent now, I hear," went on Doyle, a sarcastic note coming into his voice.

"Perfectly." Valentine's voice was as even as though conversing with his most intimate friend.

"So you told the governor?" commented the detective.

"Oh, yes?"

"I've seen the governor too."

"He didn't have much to do this morning, did he?" humorously.

"Very pretty, Jimmy. Let me ask you a question. Do you think I would be your friend if I could?"

"Do you think so yourself?"

"Yes, if you were willing to exchange the ordinary courtesies between friends."

"Meaning exactly what?"

"Favors. Now, I'll do the first one." He seated himself opposite the ex-convict.

"Thank you," in gay mood.

"Sarcasm won't win you anything with me, Jimmy. I said I'd do you a favor."

"What is it?" Valentine began to inspect his visitor anxiously.

The detective paused momentarily. Then he said deliberately:

"I'll—forget—that—job—you—did—at—Springfield—three—years—ago."

The detective leaned back in his chair, inserted his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat and gazed fixedly at Jimmy Valentine.

The eyes of the man addressed became directed at the cover of the magazine he still held, but only for an instant. He shot a defiant glare at Doyle.

"I was never in Springfield in my life," he said indignantly.

"Which Springfield?" asked Doyle significantly.

"No Springfield."

"You dodge it nicely."

"I don't see how."

"Now, which Springfield did I think you were going to say?"

"I have no idea."

"Good again. Well, I'll tell you," continued Doyle. "I meant Springfield, Mass."

Valentine raised his brows doubtfully, innocently.

"I don't think I was ever in the state of Massachusetts."

"I can prove you were in Springfield, Mass., the night the safe in the savings bank was grabbed."

"Oh, no, you can't."

"Believe me, Jimmy, I can. The witness may be a bit disreputable, but I can prove it."

"You can job me, you mean. You can get fake witnesses?" Valentine asked excitedly.

"I can send you for five at least, my boy."

"But you won't if I do you a favor?"

"You are a very good guesser, James."

"Well?"

"I want Avery."

"Avery?"

"Bill Avery, who finished a nine year stretch a month ago and joined up with your old friend Red Flanagan."

Bill Avery, concealed behind the portieres with Red, gave a violent start as he heard Doyle's words. Red had all he could do to quiet him. The aged thief, however, managed to draw a .38 caliber revolver from a side pocket in his coat—quicker to get at than the hip pocket, and then this arrangement enables a man to stand with a hand carelessly thrust into a pocket and to discharge the pistol through the coat when dire emergency threatens.

"Curse him!" he whispered to Red. "I told him I'd get him if he turned square, and when Doyle goes I'll bore him through the mouth and into his brain."

"Serve him right!" hissed Red. "And two chances for a slick getaway. No guy can go on the square without goin' crooked with his pals."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co. BIG LOCOMOTIVES

Received by B. & O. Will Give Southwestern Needed Motive Power.

The Baltimore and Ohio yesterday received word that five of the largest locomotives ever constructed are about to arrive at Baltimore. They are of the Mallet articulated compound type. Five more of the same type will be received in the near future. Each locomotive weighs 416,000 pounds, while the tanks tip the scale at 181,000 pounds, making a combined weight of 642,000 pounds. The big steamers will be placed in service over the mountain divisions of the road.

News that these huge locomotives are about ready to be placed in service was welcome news to the officials of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, as it means that more needed motive power will be available. The Southwestern has needed them for some little time, and as fast as the locomotives promised are relieved from service they will be rushed West and turned over to that division. Most of them will be in service in and out of Cincinnati on the Ohio and Indiana divisions.

RICHART

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS BY REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

YOUR LITTLE CLAY GOD.

Text, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image or any likeness of anything."—Ex. xx, 4-6.

It happened in Philadelphia. Yes, in the very city of homes, churches and orthodoxy. Searching for a plaster of paris figure, I stumbled into an idol factory. They were rushing to finish a large order of Buddhist idols for Korea. I rubbed my eyes. Dreaming? No. I could see the statue of William Penn on top of city hall from where I stood. I knew we had been sending rum and cigarettes to our benighted Asiatic brothers—but idols! Wonder what they will tell "the child-like people" about those idols? That they are the gods the great American people worship? I'd hate to be a missionary standing about when those boxes are opened. Wouldn't like to have to explain to the puzzled people just how a Christian nation happened to be sending idols to perpetuate superstition and degradation among these simple folks of the Land of the Morning Calm. I picked up a small image, a hideous little clay thing with pot belly and slant eyes, and smiled in a superior Anglo-Saxon sort of a way.

"They That Make Them"—

And yet somehow I could not help thinking as I stood among the skyscrapers at Broad and Chestnut streets a few minutes later not only of the idols and idol worshipers, but the idol makers. How about their conscience and principle, men who in the light of the twentieth century, in the third largest city of Christian America, are making images for heathen to worship? A Scripture verse kept boring in on me, "They that make them are like unto them." As I stood on the corner gazing about me, visitor from Mars like, I mused: "Worshipping God under the symbol of a little clay image or putting dependence in some other human made thing, living as if there were no God. Where's the difference?" "But those idol worshipers are credulous and superstitious, aren't they?" I know it, but listen. At a dinner party last week in cultured Boston the hostess said, "I've no superstition at all in regard to thirteen, but it's best not to risk anything." A waitress made the fourteenth guest. The whole navy seemed to rebel a few months ago when it was proposed to commission a battleship on Friday. No girl would marry on that day, of course. They feel relieved when the day is fair—"auspicious," they call it. Heavens! The very word and superstition our barbaric ancestors had centuries ago when they feared stars and eclipses. Spilling salt, breaking mirrors, black cats, new moons, will surely work us ill, while horseshoes, rabbits' feet, lucky stones and charms will protect us. Shades of Salem witchcraft! Meanwhile police departments conduct raids regularly to keep down the number of palmists, clairvoyants and their ilk. What is the sin? Attributing effects to things belonging to our own lowest creations and emotions instead of to him "from whom cometh every good and perfect gift."

A Shelf of Idols.

Then our American people have idols—things that take the place of God. Truly! For instance: In the market places on Wall, Chestnut and State streets there is a big, arrogant, swollen image called Success. American school-boys are taught to bow knee to this god every day. Not much said about the means. Sometimes least said is better. Moloch stands for cruelty; sweatshop, mine and child labor factory is his temple. He hides behind a screen of corporation or trust, and his priest calls, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Mammon's enshrined behind bars of gold. His thirst's insatiable. His devotees rob man and God. Baal, god of lust, blinks balefully under red lights, his virgins fallen women; white slaves in wide eyed terror from their brothel couches cry piteously before his lecherous priests. Meanwhile the mills of the divorce god grind on. Deep answering to deep. The seats at the fane of Eros crowded with boys and girls in dark motion picture show, the most flagrant liberties pass unnoticed by uniformed usher—these souls represent nickels, forsooth!

Your Little Clay God.

Far from all that, are you? None of those hideously sinful idols for you? Good. But remember the little images Rachel hid under her skirts, protecting them by a woman's sure defense? Not even Isaac suspected her. Any images hidden under your gown of nonsuspicion? I know a man who's adding acre to acre, children robbed of education, wife's health thrice broken, once mentally, under the strain—but, no matter, the little clay god is fattening. There's a home in an eastern city where a wife dresses her image—self. Hats, gowns and furs are lavished on it. She attends a court circle where others bow before a proud, flabby god called Society. Her husband? Prison doors opened for him once, but his friends covered the embezzlement. And your little clay god? A child, gluttony, drink, pleasure, business, a vile image you have locked up in the secret chamber of your soul? Are these real powers in your life or only poor little clay images of your own making? My mind persists in going back to the little clay god with its pot belly and slant eyes in the idol factory. And the simple minded Koreans—what better are ye than they?

New York, March 25.—B. D. Greene, who was convicted of complicity in the Savannah harbor frauds with John F. Gaynor and Captain Carter of the army, has arrived here from Atlanta.

He will join his family, which is now in Europe. Greene said he had lost only four pounds in the four years he was in prison. He looked well, and attributed it to the fact that he had a clear conscience.

SIDE LIGHTS ON OLD MEXICO AND ON HER NEW REVOLUTION

SEÑOR DON JOSE YVES LIMANTOUR, Mexican finance minister, who recently left New York rather secretly and hurriedly, seemed disposed to charge the insurrection in his country to our muckrakers. Said Don Jose:

"It may seem untrue, but I am nevertheless convinced that, except for the sensational articles relative to Mexico which were printed in your newspapers and magazines for a year or more before the insurrectionary movement developed there never would have been the trouble that has existed in my country for several months. For years President Diaz has told writers visiting Mexico that all he desired to be said about his country was the truth and has discouraged fulsome praise as much as the 'muckraking.' I believe you call it, which has been so much in evidence for some time.

"And this is all that I ask of the press of the United States or of any country in dealing with Mexico—the truth. You are familiar in a general way with the extent of foreign investments in my country, chief of which are American. If your papers have any regard for the interests of Americans with large sums of money in enterprises in Mexico and for the possibilities for the further investment of foreign capital there, it is difficult for me to understand how they can longer print sensational matter regarding Mexico. You may not 'kill the goose that lays the golden egg,' but you certainly will not help the interests of your own people in Mexico.

"Seemingly the Americans who by allying themselves directly or indirectly with that movement have hoped to avenge some alleged grievance against my government have failed to realize that the injury done so far has been as much to American as to Mexican interests. You are probably aware that in the two states to which the trouble has been almost exclusively confined there are several thousand Americans and millions of American money invested. The mining and kindred industries in Chihuahua and Sonora are largely in the hands of Americans.

"Just now those industries are crippled to a great extent, and this—must I say it?—more because of the activities of irresponsible Americans in my country and the support which they have received from this side of the border than because of the initiative of Mexicans resident in Mexico. Your people have taught my people many things they never should have known."

Alfonzo Madero, brother of Francisco T. Madero, the leader of the revolt in Mexico, evidently looks at things from a different angle. Says Madero: "To begin with, the whole state of Chihuahua is now in the hands of my brother Francisco, with the exception of the city of Chihuahua, which he can take any time he wishes. The city is now completely surrounded by the insurgents. Sonora is a flame from border to border, and the insurrection now has a firm foothold in Lower California, while to the eastward in Coahuila there is already a small force in the field. Within the next few days the insurrection will be re-enforced in that state by several thousand coal miners who have been thrown out of employment by the closing of the mines.

"It is the same story—revolt everywhere. In the state of Guerrero, in Vera Cruz, in Oaxaca and in Yucatan, everywhere the revolution is growing. Yucatan is practically lost right now to the Diaz government. It spread with remarkable quickness. The only question that has confronted the leaders was arming the people. For years they have been ready to do what they are now doing, but the government was too smart and was able to keep arms from falling into the hands of the people. So they got arms very slowly. Those who got them first used them first. That is the story of the uprising in a nutshell."

President Diaz has a plan for dividing up the great estates into small holdings for the people. Señor Limantour recently made mention of this project in New York. There is an implied promise that this will be done as soon as the insurrection is over. Says President Diaz:

"Señor Limantour, who is a good friend of mine, perhaps had in mind when making these statements a certain conversation which we had some time ago, in which I outlined to him my ideas as to the purchase by the government of some such estates which at present yield little.

"If these properties are bought by the government and divided into small lots to be owned by actual tillers of the soil their cultivation will be more practicable and the crops obtained will far exceed the inconsiderable yield which their present owners obtain.

"The price at which the lots will be sold will simply be the quotient obtained by dividing the total price paid by the government for the property by the number of lots into which it will be apportioned.

"The settlers will be allowed ten years to pay for their lots, payments to be made in ten annual installments, but as in the first year they will pay nothing they will in reality have elevated en years in which to complete their payments.

"In order that settlers may become attached to their properties and induced to take a personal interest in their cultivation they will be forbidden to mortgage or sell their lots until they shall have paid for them in full."

An amusing incident happened in Guadalajara not long ago. Two citizens of that place whose estates adjoined were constantly engaged in a wordy war. One of them was a chicken fancier, and the other prided himself on his vegetable garden.

A vagrant chicken which had wandered beyond the precincts of the fancier's chicken run invaded the vegetable garden of his neighbor. The chicken enjoyed itself hugely among the lettuce and tender sprouts of the garden until discovered by the proprietor, who immediately called in the services of a gendarme.

The officer of the law thereupon arrested the chicken and haled it before the comisario of the district, who entered on the police blotter a charge against the fowl and incarcerated it in the jail. Notification was then sent to the owner of the chicken setting forth the tale of its depredations and informing him he might release his fowl and reclaim it by the payment of $40. The chicken is still in durance vile.

A man was knocked down by a trolley car recently and was immediately arrested for injuring the car, as in falling the buttons of his coat scratched the varnished surface of the vehicle.

The City of Mexico is possibly the best policed metropolis in the world, but its officers, while vigilant, take every instruction given them in a literal sense. They will arrest anybody or anything that violates a city ordinance.

A short time ago there was a collision between two automobiles, one of the machines being so badly damaged that it had to be left at the place where the accident occurred. The persons occupying the machine were promptly bundled into the auto which was able to proceed, and the entire party went to the police station.

But that did not excuse the broken car. It was formally arrested on the spot and an officer detailed to see that it did not get up and limp back to its garage. By some chance the broken automobile was forgotten for two days, at the end of which time the police captain discovered that he was shy one gendarme. Investigation discovered the gendarme asleep in the machine, where he had camped out ever since charged with its care. And it is very cold up on this Mexican plateau at night, as the City of Mexico is more than a mile above sea level.

Fires are few and far between in the City of Mexico, as most of the buildings are built either of stone or adobe, with walls two feet or more in thickness. The fire department is therefore elementary in character, and when it turns out on parade it resembles a dog and pony circus. The engine is about the size of a teakettle and is spiritedly dragged around by a little long eared burro.

There was a fire in a photograph gallery not long ago, and the department was called out. The gallery was situated on the third floor, and the totally inadequate engine was unable to get a stream that high. When the fire company arrived at the scene the jefe in charge lined all of his men up along the sidewalk and carefully called the roll before they were permitted to get busy with the fire. The fire, of course, took every advantage of this opportunity, and by the time the firemen got on the job it was beyond control.

Among the fire fighting equipment was a small extension ladder, and it required fifteen minutes to erect it, and then no one seemed to care to ascend it, and they cannot be blamed in view of what happened afterward. Finally, some five minutes after the ladder had been set in place, one brave soul essayed the ascent, and just as he reached the top of the ladder it collapsed and slid together. This landed the daring fireman opposite the second story balcony.

He stepped off on the balcony into safety and was rewarded with a thunder of "bravos" from the spectators below. Tipping his hat in appreciation of the applause, he stood there, the admired of all beholders, while his companions in arms below cheered as wildly as the rest. Having faithfully performed their duty, they watched the fire burn itself out and then called a policeman and arrested it, also the proprietor, because in Mexico if a fire occurs in your establishment you must tell the authorities all about it, give your real name and be glad to escape with a life sentence.

JAPAN ALSO HAS AERONAUTS.

Can Conceive a Balloon Collapse as Well as Western Nations.

The Japs, having once started on the grand hike of civilization, are not to be outdone in any field. Now they are trying to fly. Not only are they trying, but it goes without saying that they will succeed before they quit the game. They always do. If they did not succeed they would not be Japs.

The mikado, the leader of modern Japanese progress, is behind the aeronauts. That is an assurance that they will eventually win. To Yamada, the owner of the dirigible balloon shown herewith, the emperor gave a royal medal. It is true that Yamada was not brilliantly successful in the flying game. Palpably and obviously he collapsed. But he tried. That is the chief thing, and that, if nothing else, was worth the medal.

Yamada's collapse was not due to his balloon or his machinery. He fell because he lost his balance. American, French, German and English aeronauts have done the same. Anybody is liable to lose his balance, even a husky man walking across a level floor.

American aeronauts have recently been flying in Japan, but in aeroplanes, not dirigibles. The Japs are an ingenious and imitative people, and we may expect them to take up the aeroplane also. Now that they have started we may be sure they will astonish the world at high flying.

Bathing With a Hippopotamus.

A hippopotamus is not the most delightful bathing companion in the world, especially on a dark night in a small tank. The hippopotamus keeper at the London zoo knows all about it.

One night recently after the zoo was closed the keeper saw his charge locked up in his sleeping quarters, a compartment adjoining the swimming pool.

Some time later in the evening a zoo watchman heard the hippo making queer noises, as if it wanted to get up and take a bath, so the watchman let the animal out. It plumped itself down in its bath with a snort of relief.

Still later the hippo keeper returned to take a plunge in the hippo's tank. He stripped and dived in.

Then followed an exciting struggle, which took place mostly under water. Each was terribly frightened by the other. One dived; the other dived. The keeper yelled for help, and the hippo bellowed in fear. Just as several of the watchmen arrived the keeper managed to scramble out, more dead than alive.

SENATE SEEKING A BELL WETHERWho Is to Be Successor to Aldrich?

END TO ONE-MAN LEADERSHIP

It Is Given Out at Washington That Differences Between Regulars and Insurgents Will Prevent the Acceptance of Any One Man to Lay Plans—Democrats Engaged in the Task of Picking a Party Leader.

Washington, March 25.—Now that they have made such large gains in the membership of the senate that they are talking of controlling it within the next two years, who will the Democrats put to the front and who will succeed Senator Aldrich as Republican leader of that body? These are questions frequently heard in Washington and will be determined within the next two weeks at caucuses to be held by senators of the two parties. It is generally recognized that one man leadership is at an end among the Republicans of the senate and that a coterie of senators will divide the mantle so long and successfully worn by Aldrich. The Democrats of the senate do not like one-man leadership. They differ in this respect from their party brethren in the house. Democratic leadership in the senate has been nominal, not actual, for many years, and the indications are now that the precedent will not be shattered at the coming session.

Although the regular and insurgent Republicans have agreed to act together in the organization of the new senate and share alike the responsibility of naming the committees, there is little in common between the two factions politically, and it is generally expected that their working arrangement will be of brief duration.

Disregarding the senate vacancies from New York, Iowa and Colorado, where the legislatures are deadlocked, the Democrats will outnumber the regular Republicans in the next senate, with thirteen insurgent Republicans exercising the balance of power. The number of Democratic senators will be forty, while the regular Republicans will be able to muster only a total of thirty-six votes. When the three vacancies in the senate are filled there will be forty-two Democrats and fourteen insurgents in the senate. The thirteen insurgents who will wield the balance of power and whose votes will be decisive in matters of legislation are: Borah of Idaho, Bourne of Oregon, Bristow of Kansas, Brown of Nebraska, Clapp of Minnesota, Crawford of South Dakota, Cummins of Iowa, Dixon of Montana, Gronna of North Dakota, La Follette of Wisconsin, Poindexter of Washington, Townsend of Michigan, and Works of California.

Eliminates One-Man Leadership.

Deprived of a majority of the membership of the senate, the regular Republicans can accomplish nothing without the support of the insurgents. This means the elimination of one-man leadership. There will be several leaders of the two wings of the Republican party in the senate. For the regulars, Senators Crane and Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, Elihu Root of New York, Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, the new chairman of the finance committee, and Sutherland of Utah will be the controlling voices, while La Follette of Wisconsin, Borah of Idaho and Cummins of Iowa, will take the lead for the insurgents. The committee on committees will practically reorganize the senate machinery. It is not to be assumed that all the old members of the committee will be reappointed. The personnel will rest largely with the chairman of the caucus, who is likely to be Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire.

The election of a party leader is now engaging the attention of senate Democrats. Some of the new blood in the senate is of the opinion that the caucus should name a real leader who will lead. There are four Democrats prominently spoken of for leadership. They are Bacon of Georgia, who with Senator Martin of Virginia is the oldest Democrat in point of service in the senate. Senator Shively of Indiana, the vice chairman of the caucus; Senator Stone of Missouri, who took the lead among senate Democrats in the last days of the recent session in the fight against the tariff board bill, and Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, who for a number of years was the minority leader in the house.

WILLIAM J. CUMMINS

Carnegie Trust Company
Officer Held to Answer.ADMITTED THEY WERE LOOKING FOR FAVORSNew York Bankers Throw Light
On Cummins Case.

New York, March 25.—Vice President R. W. Jones, jr., of the National Reserve bank, and W. E. Holloway, formerly president of the Hungarian American bank, told the grand jury that they made big loans to W. J. Cummins, indicted officer of the Carnegie Trust company, because they took Cummins's word for it that he knew what he was talking about when he told them he could get City Chamberlain Hyde to favor the National Reserve and the Hungarian with city deposits.

For two hours Jones and Holloway explained the significance of their dealings with Cummins, and the name of Charles H. Hyde appeared continuously in their testimony. Mr. Jones said frankly that having observed Cummins's ability to deliver the goods, he spoke to his friend Holloway about Cummins's connections and suggested to Holloway that helping Cummins would be a profitable thing for the Hungarian American. Holloway, admitting that he had taken advantage of the suggestion, said he was under a misapprehension. He had supposed that Jones meant that a loan to Cummins would result in large private deposits, and was surprised when he was told immediately after he let Cummins have $100,000 that the $125,000 in city deposits that came speedily was the direct outcome of the loan.

The officials in charge of the investigation as to who were the crooks in the Carnegie Trust company and as to who was responsible for the debauching of a number of bankers, regarded this work of the grand jury as the most important so far in the inquiry.

WANTS SETTLEMENT

New York Bank Superintendent Goings
After Cummins's Associates.

Nashville, Tenn., March 25.—Business circles have been disturbed by the filing of four suits in chancery by Orion H. Cheney, superintendent of banks of the state of New York, who seeks to recover from four prominent business men sums aggregating $55,000, this amount representing, so it is claimed, the indebtedness of the defendants to the wrecked Carnegie Trust company.

The defendants have either a business connection with W. J. Cummins, or have had. They are Irby Bennett, said to owe $13,400; W. C. Hunt, said to owe $15,600; J. W. McLeister, $14,500; L. C. Garabrandt, $10,230.61.

Superintendent Cheney's attorneys let it be known that the suits are only a forewarning of what is to come, and that if settlements are not made at once on other claims, like action will be taken against other former business associates and friends of Cummins.

BLAUTH IS OUT UNDER BOND

Accused Teller Waived Arraignment When Presented in Court and Was Allowed to Go Under Bond Pending His Preliminary Hearing, Which Has Been Set For April 4.—He Expresses Confidence of Acquittal.

Evansville, Ind., March 25.—When presented before Judge Sappenfield John W. Blauth, bookkeeper and teller for the Evansville Trust and Savings company, charged with embezzlement, waived arraignment and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. Neither the prosecution nor the defense was ready for trial, and the date of the preliminary hearing was fixed for April 4.

A report has been made by the examining experts who have been at work on Blauth's books. These experts assured the directors, it is said, that there was a shortage of $43,168.78.

Speaking for Blauth, his attorney said: "We are ready for trial. We have every confidence in the ultimate outcome. It will not be unfavorable to my client." Blauth refused to make any statement for publication.

Blauth, who has had the reputation of being the best dressed bank clerk in Evansville, was carefully attired when he appeared in court. He did not seem to be nervous. After Blauth gave bond he was permitted to go to his home. His mother is said to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

COMPROMISE PROPOSED

Illinois Legislature May Turn Referendum Plan Back on People.

Springfield, Ill., March 25.—A compromise on the initiative and referendum is the program in the senate. This plan resulted from a conference of the senate Republicans. The proposal is to amend the senate resolution in such a way as will meet the approval of the house.

The main issue in the legislature will be the proposal for the initiative and referendum amendment as against the submission of the amendment revolutionizing the revenue laws.

The substance of the scrap indicates that the legislature has no disposition to adopt either the revenue amendment or the initiative and referendum proposition. The situation on either side of the legislature is to hurl both propositions into the air and to compromise upon a proposal to call a constitutional convention. There is to be all sorts of opposition from all of the sources which are interested. Springfield is jammed with lobbyists on both sides of the case.
